Will Wilson earned his Ph.D. in Physics, then researched topics in theoretical ecology and evolution. Most recently he's written two books on urban environments, Constructed Climates (2011) and Stormwater (2016).

As we celebrate the thriving development of the Triangle we often fail to focus on all of the costs. The making of a city converts green spaces to hard spaces, and that action leads to environmental changes. This talk will focus on air quality, stormwater, and environmental health problems in urban environments.
